ATLONA TECHNOLOGIES RELEASES A NEW LINE OF MINI DISPLAYPORT FIBER OPTIC CABLES DESIGNED TO EXTEND THE DISTANCE CAPABILITIES OF DISPLAYPORT.

Atlona Technologies announces their latest release of the new Mini DisplayPort fiber optic cable line.

Atlona Technologies, solutions based manufacturer of audio video accessories, has been paving the way with the new and increasing demand of technology such Mini DisplayPort. Atlona has once again stepped up to the plate with their all new Mini DisplayPort fiber optics cable line. As many DisplayPort users already know, getting DisplayPort signal through straight cable at lengths over 15 meters is like trying to make a rope out of sand. Atlona's fiber optic DisplayPort cables are designed to let users extend their Digital Mini DisplayPort Displays distances up to 330ft away from the desired Mac or PC computers, all while still maintaining the highest video quality and extremely high resolutions up to WQXGA (2560x1600).

For those needing a Mini DisplayPort output to extend signal from Mac computer to Apple displays such as the Apple 24", iMac 27", or even a Dell display, a Mini DisplayPort to DisplayPort adapter has been included. This adapter will also compensate those looking to connect PC Computers with DisplayPort outputs to Dell, NEC, Samsung or any other displays with Display Port inputs. Along with allowing DPCP and HDCP compliance, these cables are equipped with EDID pass through. Powered through the computer's Mini DisplayPort output, these cables do not require a power supply.

Atlona's new Mini DisplayPort fiber optic cables are officially in stock in the following lengths and MSRP:

AT-F13044L-10: 10M (33ft) MSRP: $499.00
